In Minnesota in 2010

Though MCBW tracks all homicides in which the known or suspected perpetrator was a family member, a household member, or a caregiver, we want to pay special attention to battered women murdered by intimate partners, as these cases account for the majority of murders of women in the United States and in Minnesota. Of the 21 adults killed in 2010 due to familial and domestic violence, 15 were women killed by a current or former intimate partner.

When we use the terms battering and domestic violence, we are referring to the pattern of violence that affects the level of fear and quality of life for all women. It encompasses both physical and sexual violence and includes pervasive emotional abuse and threats; control over finances and access to transportation; manipulation of and often harm to the children; and social norms that persist today that a man has the right to put his partner in her place. While these same dynamics are also present in same sex relationships and on rare occasions women use similar tactics against their male partners, it is the broader social institutions that support this pervasive and historically sanctioned pattern of behavior that MCBW seeks to change.

In reporting the total number of deaths, it is important to note that at least this many women and children have been murdered. We cannot be certain we have not missed some deaths since we must use a method of data collection that primarily relies on news accounts. No state or federal agency collects comprehensive data on domestic homicides. In addition, the murders of women and children of color, Native American women and children, immigrant and refugee women and children, women and children living in poverty, rural women, lesbian/gay/bisexual/transgender people, and women and children used in prostitution and sex trafficking may be underreported in our listing as they frequently go unreported in mainstream media.

At least 15 women

Were murdered in cases where the suspected, alleged, or convicted perpetrator was a current or former husband, boyfriend, or intimate partner.

At least 7 children under the age of 18

Were murdered in cases where the suspected, alleged, or convicted perpetrator was the father, mother, guardian, or household/family member of the child, or the perpetrator was the parent's spouse or intimate partner.

At least 4 friends, family members or interveners

Were murdered in domestic violence-related situations.

At least 2 men

Were murdered in a case where the suspected, alleged, or convicted perpetrator was a current or former intimate partner.

At least 10 minor children

Were left motherless due to their mothers' domestic violence murders.

Red Flags for Batterer Lethality

In this report we pay special attention to battered women murdered by intimate partners, as the majority of women murdered in the United States and in Minnesota are murdered by their current or former intimate partners. Various tools to assess for high risk or potential lethality have been developed based on research of women killed by their intimate partners. It is impossible to predict with certainty which batterers will become lethal to their victims. All batterers should be viewed as potentially deadly, though there are well-documented indicators of lethality of which everyone should be aware. Included in the factors that have been identified as possible lethality indicators are: separation, extended history of domestic violence or other violence, pregnancy, threats or fantasies of homicide or suicide, access to a firearm, threats to use a weapon, stalking, attempted strangulation, forced sex, extreme jealousy and control of daily activities.

We look at the homicide cases in Minnesota and see whether information was known regarding key lethality factors. In assessing for lethality factors, MCBW relies almost entirely on media reports of the homicides. MCBW specifically focuses on four lethality factors: the victim's attempts to leave the abuser, previous threats to kill the victim, perpetrator access to firearms, and perpetrator history of violence. MCBW has been looking at these four lethality factors since 2006. For the past five years, these lethality factors were present in a significant number of cases. We would expect that a more complete analysis of public records and interviews with friends and family of the victims would yield further information on other cases and further information on the other red flags.

There were 15 women murdered in Minnesota in 2010 by a current or former intimate partner.

Victim's Attempts to Leave the Abuse: While conventional wisdom persists that leaving an abuser will always make a battered women safer, separation often increases the risks of further harm, as batterers "step up" their efforts to control or intimidate the victim. In 2010, 67% of the intimate partner femicides occurred after the woman had left the relationship or when she was attempting to leave. This statistic has been consistent for the past few years (62 – 67%) and supports the national studies indicating that the most dangerous time for battered women can be when they leave, or attempt to leave, the batterer.

Ashley Sullivan had separated from her abusive boyfriend and was living with her mother and stepfather at the time of her murder. Her ex-boyfriend Shawn Haugen, in violation of criminal court no contact orders, went to the home and murdered both Ashley and her stepfather, Chester Gronewold.

Threats to Kill the Victim: Threats by the abuser to kill the victim are among the most reliable indicators of lethality and are the most often overlooked by the criminal and civil justice systems. A review of the media reports of the 2010 murders does not reveal much information about threats to kill. What we do know is that at least 40% of the victims had experienced prior abuse. We know that in at least three instances, the women had experienced threats to kill and can only surmise that threats to kill may have been part of the prior abuse in other cases.

Billy Nash was released from jail with a criminal court order to have no contact with Pauline Nash. Pauline Nash had reported that she was afraid that Billy Nash would kill her. On April 2nd, Billy Nash went to Pauline's home and killed her by stabbing her over 70 times.

Access to Firearms: In 2010, 9 of 15 (60%) intimate partner femicides were committed with firearms. While the percentage of femicides using firearms fluctuates year to year, murder with firearms is the most frequent weapon of choice, supporting the studies showing that possession of firearms can increase the risk of lethality.

On March 28th, Svetlana Munt was shot to death in front of her three minor children by her ex-husband Joel Munt. Joel Munt rammed Svetlana's car into a tree with her and the children in it. He then shot her seven times through the car window at close range. One of the children was injured when stuck in the face by the shattering glass.

Challenge to Minnesota Communities

Domestic violence and domestic homicide have a devastating effect on every person living in Minnesota. Each of the victims whose story is told here was someone's daughter, son, mother, father, sister, brother, family member, intimate partner, friend, neighbor, or co-worker. An abusive relationship that ends in the murder of the victim illustrates the failure of our systems and society to respond effectively to the needs of battered women and abused children.

We pledge to remember the women, children, family members, and friends who die each year from domestic violence and child abuse, as well as the women and children used in prostitution and sex trafficking, who are also battered women and abused children in need of protection from abuse.

Our challenge to the community is to not let these deaths go unnoticed but rather to use these brutal murders as a springboard for action.

While we have research and tools that can assist us in identifying the people most likely to reoffend and those most likely to engage in high risk and lethal behaviors, nothing we have can predict 100% of the batterers who will seriously injure or kill. Some of the women injured and killed in Minnesota each year, were so isolated or so disconnected from systems that they never told anyone what was happening and no one had any information about the abuse. But for many of these women, they did interact with our legal system, our medical system, our mental health system or they reached out to family, friends or community members. It is precisely those cases where we can start to make a difference. We can learn from the tragic loss of life.

Over the past 30 years, we have learned much about domestic violence. Our laws have improved; our systems and the personnel within those systems have learned, changed and improved how they respond to domestic violence; we talk with our children about health relationships and about domestic violence. We applaud all of those efforts. But we can do even better. That is the challenge we have for ourselves and for all of Minnesota.

Recommendations for the Community

In some intimate partner femicides examined for this report, there were no known red flags for potential lethality. However, in the majority, at least one of the leading lethality indicators was present. As a community, we should not assume that there is nothing we can do to prevent intimate partner homicides. While the ultimate responsibility for these murders rests with the perpetrators alone, opportunities for meaningful intervention in many of these cases were missed. Especially in the cases in which the victim reached out for help, we should examine the reasons why our systems ultimately failed to protect those victims from lethal violence.

Safety is the Priority: Safety must be a priority. When talking about healthy relationships, when considering criminal or family court policies, when making funding decisions, the starting point needs to be safety. All too often, important decisions are made and policies are enacted that provide for an "opt out" or other special considerations for domestic violence—relegating safety to an afterthought and not a priority. When mistakes are made, people can and do lose their lives. The stakes are too high for us to get it wrong. We must prioritize safety.

Assess Batterer Lethality at Every Opportunity: Improvements in all system responses will improve when batterer lethality assessment is institutionalized as the norm rather than the exception. In every circumstance in which battered women or abusers encounter the criminal justice system, the civil or family court, or an advocacy program, a concerted effort should be made to assess potential lethality. Many excellent assessment tools exist, and most rely on a routine, direct inquiry of the victim as to the presence of lethality indicators. In some cases, a review of public records would create sufficient concern to assess a high risk of lethality. Criminal proceedings do not represent the sole opportunity to assess batterer lethality. When battered women seek protection orders, are involved in family court proceedings, or seek services from community advocacy programs, an active, routine inquiry as to the potential lethality of batterers is critical to protecting the lives of battered women.

Hold Batterers Accountable: Assessing for lethality will have minimal impact unless we have the resources to effectively apprehend, monitor and, when necessary, incarcerate dangerous batterers. Law enforcement, the courts, and battered women’s advocacy programs all struggle to meet the public safety needs of the community with limited resources. An investment in the whole spectrum of public safety systems is necessary to identify, monitor, and apprehend the most dangerous offenders.

Invest in Prevention: Effective intervention in domestic violence cases and improved identification of high risk and lethal offenders are not the full answer. We must also commit to prevention efforts to stop the violence before it starts. It is critical to stem the incidents of domestic violence by creating an environment where everyone knows that violence will not be tolerated and where healthy, respectful and violence free relationships are the norm for everyone.

If we do not invest in prevention to stem this epidemic, if we do not understand the impact of legislative changes on domestic violence victims, if we fail to keep safety as a top priority, women and children will continue to be killed.

We cannot afford to compromise on safety.

Women murdered in cases where the suspected, alleged, or convicted perpetrator was a current or former husband, boyfriend, or intimate partner.

Ashley Ann Sullivan Age 25 Antrim Township January 17, 2010	Ashley Ann Sullivan was shot to death along with her stepfather, Chester Gronewold, by her ex-boyfriend Shawn Eric Haugen on the morning of January 17, 2010. In December 2009, Shawn Haugen had been arrested for domestic abuse and then arrested twice more for violating a no contact order issued in connection with the domestic abuse charge..Ashley and her two sons were staying with her mother and stepfather, Chester Gronewold, due to a fire at her home. Haugen killed Ashley and her stepfather and then killed himself. Ashley’s mother, Ashley’s 18-month old son with Mr. Haugen, and a Gronewold grandson were at the house at the time of the murders, but were physically unharmed.
Sarah Mitzuk Age 32 Hugo January 19, 2010	Michael Mitzuk shot his wife, Sarah Mitzuk, in an upstairs bedroom and then killed himself in a nearby bathroom. Sarah’s father found the bodies when he arrived early on the morning of January 19th to babysit his four-year old grandson. His grandson was in the home, but unharmed. Her friends indicated that Sarah was pregnant.
Denna Marie Glaeser Age 46 Minneapolis February 10, 2010	Denna Glaeser’s body was found on a sidewalk in Minneapolis. She was found half-naked, lying on her stomach with a comforter over her face & body and her legs tied together. While police have investigated various acquaintances, no one has been arrested for the crime and exact cause of death has not been stated.
Debrah Nederhiser Age 59 Nodine February 23, 2010	Debrah Nederhiser was killed as a result of gunshots fired by her husband, Morgan Nederhiser, in her bedroom and then he shot himself. The couple had married in the fall of 2009.
Brittany A Ellis Age 19 Brooklyn Center March 14, 2010	Relando Jackson’s mother called 911 because her son reported to her there was a suicidal woman he believed to be dead near Shingle Creek in Brooklyn Center. Police met Jackson and he took them to the bank of Shingle Creek where they found the body of Brittany Ellis. Jackson and Brittany Ellis had been romantically involved for about two years. Jackson claims they were walking on the bridge and they began to argue. He claimed that they slapped each other, he struck her, and he left her crying. After he went home, Jackson said he came back to the creek and found Brittany with her face in the water. The medical examiner found the cause of death to be complex homicidal violence including contusions, abrasions, strangulation, and blunt force head injuries. Jackson has been charged with second degree murder.

Svetlana Vladimirovna Munt Age 32 Mankato March 28, 2010	Svetlana Munt and Joel Munt were divorced. There had been multiple court hearings regarding custody and parenting time. Joel Munt had a history of threatening and abusing Svetlana. Court records reference incidents where Joel Munt threatened to hurt and kill Svetlana. At one point an order for protection was issued against Joel Munt. Joel Munt had supervised parenting time with the couples' three minor children. On March 28 th , Svetlana picked up the children from parenting time. As she drove away, Joel Munt rammed Svetlana Munt's car into a tree with her and the three children in the car. He then approached the car and shot Svetlana through the car window, hitting her seven times in the head while the children, ages 4, 5, and 7 watched. Joel Munt then put the children into another nearby vehicle, which he took from its owner at gunpoint, and drove away. After a car chase, Joel Munt was arrested. He was charged with four counts of first degree murder among other charges. The children have been placed in protective custody.
Pauline Nash Age 42 Minneapolis April 2, 2010	Brittany Nash, a college student, said she was awakened at about 3:00 a.m. to her mother's screams. Brittany ran to the bedroom and saw what appeared to be her father hitting her mother with his fist. She ran out of the home to call 911. Her 13-year old sister entered the bedroom and saw her father, Billy Nash, repeatedly stabbing her mother. She told him to stop but he wouldn't. Eventually this child grabbed the perpetrator around the neck and pulled him off the victim. She then ran out of the home with the knife. The officers found Pauline bleeding profusely. She was transported to the hospital but did not survive her injuries. Billy Nash was covered in blood and stated: "I'm sorry sergeant that you had to come out here tonight for this She was driving me crazy. . . . I killed the b___." The medical examiner found more than 70 separate stab wounds, which were concentrated in the chest area and head. Billy Nash pled guilty to murder and was sentenced to 40 years in prison. Brittany Nash said she wanted people to remember her mother, a personal care attendant, as a loving, caring soul who treated others as she wanted to be treated. Pauline is survived by six children.
Natalia Jurjevna Tomasovic Age 55 Columbia Heights April 17, 2010	Police officers were called to a parking lot of a restaurant in Columbia Heights and found Natalia Tomasovic dead. Her husband, Jozef Tomasovic, shot Natalia before turning the gun on himself. Near his body the police found a handgun. Near Natalia's body was a pet carrier with a cat inside. The cat was unharmed. Neighbors had seen her walking with the pet carrier earlier being followed by her husband in the couple's car.

Barbara Miller Deboise Age 56 St. Louis Park April 20, 2010	Barbara Miller Deboise was found stabbed to death in her home in St. Louis Park. Barbara's husband, Howard Charles Deboise, had a long history of abusing and intimidating his wife. He had made threats to kill her. She had recently moved out of the house. Howard Deboise was arrested in Kandiyohi County and charged with second degree murder.
Amy Alese Terborg Age 28 Minneapolis April 29, 2010	Amy Terborg met Trace Maxwell while she was working in the Southdale Mall. According to her family during the course of this relationship Trace was abusive. Early in the morning of April 29, 2010, Trace came to Amy's new apartment in North Minneapolis, shot and killed her and also shot and wounded her roommate. Police believe Trace Maxwell is also connected to the killings of two other men at two other locations. Amidst a police chase, Trace Maxwell killed himself with a gunshot wound.
Kay Marie Peterson Age 50 Duluth May 27, 2010	Kay Peterson filed for divorce in March. On May 27 th , Michael Peterson shot Kay Peterson in the head three times before turning the gun on himself. Michael Peterson died. The couple had three adult sons.
Svetlana Hanson Age 25 Eagan August 20, 2010	Police officers found Svetlana and Charles Hanson dead of gunshot wounds in their home in Eagan. Svetlana's ex-husband Robin Bhattacharyya shot at the couple through the front window of their home and then killed himself in their yard. Svetlana's divorce from Bhattacharyya became final in 2009, but they had been separated since July 2008. Three children (Svetlana's two stepchildren and her nine-month old child) were sleeping in the home at the time while Svetlana's father was with them in the living room when they were killed. Neither he nor the children were hurt.
Bilha Omare Age 32 Vadnais Heights October 11	When authorities went to a home in Vadnais Heights to do a welfare check, they found the bodies of Bilha Omare and two of her children, a nine- and twelve-year old. Later that same day, they arrested the husband and father, Justus Kebabe. They found him along Interstate 35 with his youngest child, a three-year old. Kebabe has confessed to killing his wife by hitting her with a golf club and strangling her with an electrical wire and killing two of his children by drugging them and drowning his son in the bathtub and smothering his daughter with a pillow. In December 2008, Kebabe was charged with fifth-degree domestic violence, pled guilty to disorderly conduct and was required to get domestic violence counseling at that time. For the October murders, Kebabe pled guilty to three counts of second degree murder and was sentenced to 25 ½ years for each murder.

Men murdered by Intimate Partners

James Nibbe Age 26 Lake Crystal August 31, 2010	James Nibbe was shot in the head by his wife, Jennifer Nibbe, while he slept. His wife called 911 and claimed an intruder to the home had shot her husband. Law enforcement officials did not find evidence consistent with an intruder at the crime scene. They subsequently learned that Jennifer Nibbe had a drug habit, significant debts, and had taken out a life insurance policy on James. There was also other evidence indicating that she was having a relationship with someone else. Prosecutors have charged her with second-degree murder and also are taking the case to the grand jury seeking first-degree murder charges.
Wendall Abraham Age 64 Garrison September 23, 2010	After a fight in their home, Wendall Abraham was killed when his wife, Helen Mitchell Abraham, ran over him with her car as she was trying to leave and he stood behind the car. She dragged his body into the woods with a rope to prevent it from being discovered and then left the area. Authorities during a welfare check found his body on October 9 th . His wife was arrested three days later. She is charged with intentional murder in the second degree.

About the Minnesota Coalition for Battered Women

The Minnesota Coalition for Battered Women was founded in 1978 to serve as a unifying voice for battered women and to link battered women's programs in the state with the common purpose of ending domestic violence.

MCBW is a statewide, member-based organization serving more than 84 local, regional, and statewide member organizations, and their additional 42 satellite offices, that advocate for an end to battering. The types of programs operated by MCBW members include battered women's shelters and safe homes, community advocacy programs, criminal justice intervention projects, state and national training and technical assistance organizations, human rights organizations, and homeless shelters and transitional housing programs. Members include 16 culturally specific and population specific programs serving differing communities.

MCBW promotes individual, institutional, and cultural social change and works to end oppression based on gender, race, age, sexual orientation, class, and disability. The key program areas of MCBW include: public policy advocacy; information and resources; public awareness; training and technical assistance; and networking.

MCBW's activities include resources and referrals for individuals, legislative and public policy advocacy on a statewide and federal level, sponsoring training events for programs that serve battered women, coordinating statewide task force meetings, serving as an information clearinghouse, maintaining a web site, and publishing public awareness and prevention initiatives.

Mission Statement:

The mission of the Minnesota Coalition for Battered Women is to provide a voice for battered women and member programs; challenge systems and institutions so they respond more effectively to the needs of battered women and their children; promote social change; and support, educate, and connect member programs.

Vision Statement:

The vision of the Minnesota Coalition for Battered Women is to end violence against women and their children and to achieve social justice for all.

The Minnesota Coalition for Battered Women publishes The Femicide Report, a report on women and children murdered in our state, to educate the public about the lethality of domestic violence and child abuse. We report on the murders of women and children at the hands of abusers to direct attention to the challenges faced by all of the women and children who are living with abuse and as a call to all Minnesotans to come together because it takes the entire community to end violence.

The 2010 Femicide Report is compiled from news accounts. Please contact MCBW if we have missed a death or if you have updated or more complete information on any femicide.

We ask that the Minnesota Coalition for Battered Women be credited when information from this report is used.
